India Meteorological Department*New Delhi, the 14th January 1959Memorandum on the probable amount of rain and snow in North-West India in January, February and March 1959

It is possible in some years to form a rough estimate of the probable amount of Winter Precipitation in North-West India during January to March (with the exception of March rainfall in Uttar Pradesh), from certain antecedent atmospheric conditions in different parts of the globe. The factors which act as guides in this matter are, in the order of decreasing reliability, the following:—

- (1) Mean pressure in December in South America,
- (2) The westerly component of the upper winds over Northern India at a height of 5 to 8 kms. (September second half and October first half),
- (3) December rain at Port Blair,
- (4) December rain at Quetta.

2. Division 'Northwest India'

In this memorandum 'Northwest India' is taken to consist of Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab (I) (including Himachal Pradesh and Delhi), Rajasthan, Gujarat, Saurashtra and Cutch.

3. Data

The relevant data for the present season are:—

- (1) South American pressure—Pressure was 0.8 mm. (1.1 mb.) above normal in December,
- (2) The high level winds over Northern India—the westerly component of the upper winds was slightly stronger than usual over New Delhi and Gwalior,
- (3) December rainfall at Port Blair was in large defect.
- (4) Quetta rain was in moderate excess in December.

4. Conclusion

Out of the four factors which are used in forecasting the winter precipitation in Northwest India this year, South American Pressure is very favourable, Quetta Rain and Port Blair Rain are favourable and high level winds over Northern India are slightly favourable. The combined rainfall and snowfall in Northwest India during the period January to March 1959 is likely to be normal or in slight excess.
